5. Assessment Question:	How did the buildings and dance classes at the Perry-Mansfield Modern Dance program reflect the setting of the camp?
6. Contextual Paragraph	The performing arts camp established by Charlotte Perry and Portia Mansfield was not always in this location. Prior to its location in Routt County, it was located near Eldora, Colorado. After continual interruptions by onlookers, Perry and Mansfield decided to move the camp earning the money to do so by teaching classes in Chicago. The camp is listed in the National Register due to its built and historical significance. The camp offered educational, recreational, performing arts, and modern dance activities, and was unique in the nation for combining these activities in one location. The teaching of modern dance at the camp was cutting edge for the time period, and for many, many years all modern dancers had been to the Perry-Mansfield complex at one time or another. The site itself was selected so that the participants could be in a natural setting. History Colorado states, “Perry and Mansfield were not only patrons of the arts, but also protectors of the environment so they tried to build the camp in a way that didn’t harm the natural surroundings. Little evidence exists of formal campus planning that might have dictated how the buildings were placed on the site, which gives the feeling that it came together in a rather organic manner.”

7. Connection to Historic Preservation	The Perry-Mansfield Historic Site is significant under several criteria (A: Relating to a person and B- relating to an event) in the National Register of Historic Places and the nomination narrative highlights the special importance of the partnership between Perry and Mansfield in creating and running the longest, most successful modern dance company partnership in the United States. They did this while also providing educational and recreational opportunities for participants at the same time. The site is also significant for the built structures which provided a unique place-based setting which supported theater and dance. Historically this is one of the only places in the country which supported the arts in this type of setting. The site was added in the National Register in 1995 but the period of significance and importance ends in 1967 when Charlotte Perry and Portia Mansfield transferred ownership of the camp. Today the camp is still operational, and Stevens College remains a steward of the location. Since 1994, the Perry-Mansfield historic site has received over $900,000 in support from the State Historical Fund to preserve and protect the historic site.
