6. Contextual Paragraph	Over time Trinidad, Colorado has been a community that has constantly reinvented itself. Whether referred to as a ranch town, an arts town, and architectural gem, or the home to eclectic businesses, the title will fit and people will often nod their head in agreement. Felipe Baca played an important role in the development and founding of the city of Trinidad. Purchased in 1873 through a trade for 22,000 pounds of wool, the adobe house which was originally constructed for John Hough, still exists today as part of the History Colorado Regional Museum System and is known as the Baca House.
7. Connection to Historic Preservation	Located in the Southern Rockies, near the border of New Mexico, Trinidad's Corazon de Trinidad was designated in 1973 and placed in the National Register of Historic Places. It is considered to be one of the most intact 19th century cities in Colorado. The Felipe Baca House (Formerly the Hough Residence) is an important historic home in this district and was placed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1970 as a stand-alone building prior to the establishment of the historic district.

	The Felipe Baca Residence (Formerly the Hough Residence) is significant as one of the earliest examples of Trinidad’s architecture including elements of Greek Revival and Spanish Colonial/ Territorial style. The home is constructed of brick and covered with adobe stucco and has an elaborate roof and dentils under the eaves. The style of the house gives an element of grandeur to the building and Trinidad’s architecture as well. The house is also significant because it represents the early settlers of Trinidad including John Hough and Felipe Baca.
