

ABOUT & HOW TO GET INVOLVED

Indie Lens Pop-Up is a neighborhood series that brings people together for film screenings and community-driven conversations. Featuring documentaries seen on PBS's Independent Lens, Indie Lens Pop-Up draws local residents, leaders and organizations to discuss what matters most, from newsworthy topics, to family and relationships. Make friends, share stories, and join the conversation.

Maryland Public Television (MPT) is proud to serve as a producing partner for Indie Lens Pop-up screening series once again this year! As a producing partner, MPT invites you to host one or more screenings of films of your choosing. There is no cost to you.

MPT will:

- provide DVD copies of each film.
- provide materials including film descriptions, flyer templates, images, surveys, introduction script, and discussion guide. Materials will be posted on a dropbox page once available.
- assist with promotion. MPT has a dedicated webpage where all public screenings will be listed. In addition, MPT will send out emails to promote screenings.
- assistance with speaker acquisition, as available.

Host Partners will:

- select the film(s) you would like to screen during the screening windows.
- promote your own screening events.
- ask audience members to complete a survey at the conclusion of each film.
- after the screening event, return the completed surveys and DVDs to MPT.

If your organization would like to screen one or more films in this series, reach out to Stephanie Ryan at sryan@mpt.org. Please provide contact information, venue name & address, film(s) name, and preferred screening date & time.
