

AMERICAN GRADUATE CHAMPION

Gwyneth Jones

Gwyneth is the passionate library media guru at Murray Hill Middle School in Laurel, Maryland and loves the opportunity to connect real world engagement with creativity and content creation. Gwyneth is a Google Certified Teacher and the author of the award winning blog The Daring Librarian. Ms. Jones has received many awards including; being named a Mover and Shaker by Library Journal Magazine in 2011 and named the PBS-NTTI “Teacher of the Year” in 2001. Her work and writings have been featured in the New York Times, The Washington Post, and the Huffington Post.

For Gwyneth, it’s all about the kids!

Ms. Jones sees every day working with her Murray Hill Middle School kiddos as a challenge and an opportunity to connect real world engagement with creativity and content creation. She uses technology and digital media to inspire her students to use their talents, skills and imagination to make a difference not only in the school, but the community.

Get inspired and read The Daring Librarian Blog!

Gwyneth is a mentor, leader, collaborator, media pioneer, and goes the extra mile to improve educational outcomes for students in Maryland and beyond! She is an upbeat educator who strives for those transformative Aha! moments that make learning significant and memorable.

Here are two innovative ways she uses technology to motivate and engage students.

- Video Vine Book Trailers
- Conversations Without Borders

